

The designs on this page should print at 3.25" across the diameter of the dashed-line circle. To ensure that your design prints as close to the intended size as possible, when you print this page, choose "actual size" in your printer settings.

The colored design illustrates the color layout and detailed drawing of the wreath.

It is not necessary to transfer all the details, and it would be difficult to do so especially if you are tracing, using an iron-on or heat-transfer pen, or using a prick-and-mark method.

Instead, refer to the more minimal design below. Transfer the stems for the smaller evergreens, but not the needles. Then, use the design drawing as a guide for stitching in the small needles.

If you are confident in your stitching, you can also transfer just the stems of the larger evergreens. Then, use the diagram as a guide for stitching the larger evergreen needles.

If you decide to do the latter, make sure you can distinguish which stems lines are which type of evergreen.
